Call for Papers: Volumes in 2021 and 2022

Volume 2 (1) 2021

Call for Papers, 2021 Vol 2 (1): “Ecopsychology” in Hispanic America.

(other accepted labels: South American and Latin American)

(Deadline for submissions May 1, 2021; Both English and Spanish submissions accepted)

Themes: 1) Interpretation (theories, science, and practices) of American “Ecopsychology,” after the 1960s, from Mexico to Patagonia. 2) How does one create an autochthonous “ecopsychology” in a colonized continent? 3) New practitioners and approaches. 4) What of “indigenous wisdom” survives unchanged from pre-colonial times that can inform a new “ecopsychology”? (Make your case for an additional theme to be included.)

Volume 3 (1) 2022

Call for Papers, 2022 Vol 3 (1): “Ecopsychology” and Colonialism: The Consequences of Imposing "Nature" (or “Ecopsychology”) onto Natural Peoples.

(Deadline for submissions May 1, 2022)

Themes: 1) Local versus dominant post-colonial ideas of “self,” “nature,” and/or “consciousness.” 2) Hyperlocal: Ecological resistance of marginalized ethnic groups. 3) What happens when local indigenous populations lack the scientific and/or statistical know-how to safeguard their eco-cultural legacies? 5) When is the term “colonization” an overgeneralized and unfair tag that masks local ignorance? (Make your case for an additional theme to be included.)

Pre-Submission Guidelines: Please send your manuscript for a first-look evaluation and relevancy check to the Editor-in-Chief: intljournal.ecopsychology@gmail In the subject line, specify the volume to which you wish to make a submission. In the main text provide a short synopsis explaining how your submission directly addresses the themes under either volume.
