Skyward HO!

Braving the severe cold for the sake of science, the intrepid members of the astronomy class met last Tuesday evening on the north balcony of the Quad for night observation. Ed Nix and Helen Nadsen observed the moon assiduously but did not seem especially interested in the queen of the skies. By the aid of the telescope, a large star was discovered just above the dome. It was promptly named Walker and was identified as belonging to Class 4, which also includes blue moons. What was thought to be the great veil nebulae turned out to be smoke from the furnace. Some of the young astronomers trained their glasses on the girls' dorm, but they had no luck.

With the large telescope five of Jupiter's moons and the nebulae in Orion and Andromeda could be seen. The moon and the constellations of the Pleiades, Orion, Cassiopea, Taurus, Northern Cross, Pegasus, Andromeda, Hyades, Ursa Major and Minor, Gemini, Aries, and several individual stars were also observed.

STAFF MEMBER RESIGNS

The Rooter has been greatly weakened by the resignation of Mrs. Lanita Jewett from the staff. She has been forced to withdraw from school because of ill health. Mrs. Jewett started the publication and has been largely instrumental in what success it may have had. Though she carried twenty-two units of work, she spent a good bit of time helping to get out the Rooter. We of the staff are sorry to have her go.

BAD TIDE

Now that the semester is nearly over it is about time to think of renewing subscriptions. Despite our brags about being self-sufficient we are running rather close financially. During the fall semester it will exhaust our funds to put out ten issues at fifty cents a subscription. We cannot see that we can cut off our eighteen issues for the same price. If we do not raise the subscription price we will have to be subsidized by the student body. Before taking action we would like to get the reactions of the students on this matter.

TO A DROP OF SPARKLING DEW

Oh little drop of sparkling dew,
Upon a blade of grass,
Your splendor is so fragile,
Shattered by slightest blast.

But sparkle there while yet you may
Oh little drop of dew,
Some traveller on his weary way
May pause and admire you.

V.L.B.

We need more news reporters. It seems to be the consensus in some quarters that we do not run enough straight news. We are somewhat handicapped because our paper is only a weekly and some news would be necessarily old at the time of publication. However, a good write-up is always acceptable. There are always some points and details concerning an event that can be explained to advantage.

We need regular reporters to cover definite beats. Surely, there are a number of people who are journalismically inclined and have had experience with this sort of thing. But experience, though very helpful, is not necessary. Regular reporters can not be everywhere and nothing can equal first hand information. If everyone would write up the news he sees it would help a lot.

STUDENTS!!!

The traffic squad is going to be more strict this coming semester about the lads which are often broken by students when hurrying to school. They would like the college students cooperation in this matter so that they would not have to inconvenience any student by giving him a ticket.

TID-BITS

George Christopher and Clyde Patenaude, two budding young scientists, have just perfected a compound that will solve the present day demand for a cure-all. Their medicine is guaranteed to cure eczema, lumbago, tonsillitis, and that tired feeling caused by constant study. The young geniuses hope to have their product on the market very soon.

Leo Schussman has started a crusade against the manufacture of dog biscuits. He says that is no way to treat a dog.

Julius Ferenz is seriously considering being a horse doctor. He rode a horse once and it had such big brown eyes that he has had a motherly feeling for them ever since.

Duke McMillian has been feeling very indignant ever since someone told him that Scotchmen had a general reputation for being somewhat thrifty.

A TRUE STORY.

Mr. Hollister, after dismissing his Am.Govt. class Monday when the heat was minus: "I hope you find a lots warmer place and I'm not wishing you any ill luck either."

"Smith is a man who takes his hat off to nobody."

"How does he get his hair cut?"

New Resident--And how much do I owe you for the roof?

Contractor--Forget it! That's one on the house.

Prof.--You had better watch your step in my classroom.

Stude--What's the matter? Flooring loose, sir?
The "College Bloodhounds" are still on the job and going strong. However, they should be reprimanded for their carelessness, as they obliterated a very important clue. Problem No. 1; the little tin box, aroused quite a discussion, and the usually cool headed group entered into such a heated argument over it that it was all melted, finger prints and all.

Problem No. 2--Who stole the mystic chemicals? MacSinfiny said that Halter Spenhan and Leon DelSmartle were the last ones in the lab before the mystic chemicals were stolen. "There are these boys now and what mischief are they up to?" The Bloodhounds wish to extend a warning to everyone to be on the lookout with such a dangerous weapon as mystic chemicals in the hands of amateurs.

Problems 3 and 4--What does the black note signify? Who is the mysterious H. DingDong? The "Bloodhounds" were fooled on their finger print expert, so they decided to study the handwriting themselves. After an extensive and concentrated study, it was unanimously voted that the mysterious H. DingDong was Hashey Bells. Hashey was interviewed. He identified the note as one he had written to Edith DeKameron in Public Speaking, indicating that she would be called on next. Miss DeKameron was called in and verified his statement, also saying that she had borrowed a book from Fay Sparks and had accidentally left it in the book when she returned it. The Bloodhounds came to the conclusion that the signature on the note, H. DingDong, was merely one of Hashey's attempts to be funny, trying to indicate that all bells ring even if they are dumbbells. DingDong.

The College Bloodhounds sure know their murder cases. Why, just think they have only been on the job two weeks and have been so successful that they have only one more problem in connection with the College murder case to solve and that is, "Who and where is the murderer?" Simple, isn't it?
