MORPHIC STRUCTURES

THIRD STREET GALLERY APRIL 1- MARCH 14

Shannon Sullivan

David Zdrazil

Shannon Sullivan's ceramic sculptural discs are reminiscent of peering through a microscope onto specimen slides that might have mineral formations as well as biological structures. Her curiosity with micro imagery was born from growing up with her mother who worked in a medical lab. Images unseen by the naked eye that require closer investigation has been an inspiration in her work, which explores the nuances present in the living world. "The work asks the viewer to question their relationship with place" to evoke the feeling of intimacy with the world that surrounds us.

David Zdrazil's work is a fusion of traditional and contemporary pottery styles from the East and West. His wood-fired ceramic vessels call upon geometric ratios, textures, historic processes and materials that Zdrazil has extracted from his surroundings. Sustainability plays a large role in his work, as he often makes use of locally found materials. He describes his work as "chunky style" in reference to the textures and masses he employs in his design as well as for the way he combines his materials.

CAREER CURRICULUM CORNER

Deidre Pike, Humboldt State's very own assistant professor in the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication asked students to read journalism and other media-related job listings on websites like Media Bistro, Journalism Jobs and the Poynter Institute job board. Students pick 20 listings and discern what employers are seeking in applicants. Then students develop lists of 10 specific job skills that they would like to glean from both their journalism major classes and other classes at HSU. This exploration takes about an hour and helps students see their education as less compartmentalized. They also get a sense of what the job market looks like today. They begin to refine their vision for their future.

It's one of 38 lessons at intro, intermediate and capstone levels, written by HSU faculty for HSU faculty. CLICK HERE if you're interested in finding a career lesson to use in your courses.

Jim McVicker and Theresa Oats: Two Views-Painting From Life

Humboldt State University Third Street Gallery presents, Two Views-Painting From Life, a two-person exhibition featuring representational paintings by husband and wife Jim McVicker and Theresa Oats, who reside on California's North Coast. Together, this exhibition explores their long partnership animated by a mutual passion for painting the landscape, still life and portraits.

McVicker and Oats met in Humboldt County and were drawn to each other by their love of the landscape and their shared approach to painting. Both artists make their work from the direct observation of their subjects, eschewing the use of photographs as an aid in their process. When not painting outdoors, they are working on still life, figure painting and portraits in their large, sunny studio. Married since 1988, they continue to make their home and studio on California's North Coast, surrounded by the magnificent landscape that brought them together.

HSU ART ALUMNI EXHIBIT

BEYOND TRADITIONS: RECENT NATIVE ART ALUMNI

April 6– May 6 / Goudi'ni Gallery
Opening reception April 6 @4:30-6:30pm

Humboldt State University's Goudi'ni Gallery presents Beyond Traditions: Recent Native Art Alumni featuring work in a variety of media by five HSU Alumni and recent art graduates on display.

Brittany Britton, Michelle Hernandez, Harley Hinkle, Nelia Marshall, and Eric Ruiz expound on histories, identities, stories and perceptions through their photography, sculpture, painting, drawing, audio, and video. Photographs, portraits, and self-portraiture mingle with drawings and paintings alongside audio installation, video performance, and sculptures to create Beyond Traditions. This exhibit weaves together the diverse studio practices, personal narratives, and perspectives of five Native American artists, providing gallery viewers with the means to broaden understanding and break through oft-held stereotypes.

The shared experience of Britton, Hinkle, Hernandez, Marshall, and Ruiz as HSU Department of Art graduates creates the opportunity to witness the commonalities and contrasts between the artistic practices of each Native alumnus. This is evident as the five artists describe intentions and backstories for their work.
