

Celebrating Writers and Writing in our Communities

Volume 3

Article 27

2020

The Trash Collectors

Logan Pollard

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/rwc>

Recommended Citation

Pollard, Logan (2020) "The Trash Collectors," Celebrating Writers and Writing in our Communities: Vol. 3, Article 27.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/rwc/vol3/iss1/27>

This Narrative is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Digital Commons @ Humboldt State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Celebrating Writers and Writing in our Communities by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ Humboldt State University. For more information, please contact kyle.morgan@humboldt.edu.

The Trash Collectors

By Logan Pollard

Hi! My name is Logan, and I want to tell you a story. Have you ever noticed how much trash gets on the sides of the streets, sidewalks, and front yards? Well, I was on an evening walk with my mom and dog when we saw a group of people (two women and a little girl) walking on the opposite side of the street. What made us notice them was the fact that they were carrying pickers and trash bags! They were saying something about trying the sides of the streets.

“Trash is everywhere now!” exclaimed one of the women, picking up a plastic bag and placing it in the trash bag that she was carrying. They were picking up trash! I considered yelling “Thanks!” at them for being so responsible for cleaning up after other people.

“Look at what I found!” yelled one of the women. She had uncovered a plastic plate in a pile of dead leaves. She placed it in the trash bag that she was carrying.

“Thanks!” shouted my mom. The group looked up, smiled and waved. I hope that you can be as responsible as them and help clean up our beautiful planet for yourself, your family, your friends, your community, and the rest of the world!