

Celebrating Writers and Writing in our Communities

Volume 6

Article 18

2024

A Revelation

Bellamy Nofsinger

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/rwc>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Nofsinger, Bellamy (2024) "A Revelation," Celebrating Writers and Writing in our Communities: Vol. 6, Article 18.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/rwc/vol6/iss1/18>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Digital Commons @ Cal Poly Humboldt. It has been accepted for inclusion in Celebrating Writers and Writing in our Communities by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ Cal Poly Humboldt. For more information, please contact kyle.morgan@humboldt.edu.

A Revelation

by Bellamy Nofsinger

A happy camper atop a mountain,
A vast landscape nested below his view,
Once scoffed and said,
"Those catty pillar and mouse rabbit and opossum
will all be gone soon."
For an incision in earth's protection
Had opened to a flare of plasma

Below the words
Below the feet
And below that
A heart was beating faster
Emerging through the underneath
Gaining on the surface
Tearing apart the future of life's prosper

Life's harmony had notice
The opossum and rabbit
Mouse and catty pillar came together
No matter their differences

Water only flows downstream
So why don't we all stop walking upstream