Reflection

Elizabeth Rosales
Humboldt State University

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/courageouscuentos

Part of the Bilingual, Multilingual, and Multicultural Education Commons, Chicana/o Studies Commons, Civic and Community Engagement Commons, Community-Based Learning Commons, Creative Writing Commons, Curriculum and Instruction Commons, Domestic and Intimate Partner Violence Commons, Educational Sociology Commons, Ethnic Studies Commons, Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies Commons, Gender and Sexuality Commons, History Commons, Inequality and Stratification Commons, Latin American Languages and Societies Commons, Latina/o Studies Commons, Modern Literature Commons, Politics and Social Change Commons, Race and Ethnicity Commons, Reading and Language Commons, and the Theory, Knowledge and Science Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/courageouscuentos/vol1/iss1/28

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License © 2016 Department of Critical Race, Gender & Sexuality Studies (CRGS) at Humboldt State University.
This Counternarratives and Reflections is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ Humboldt State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in CouRaGeouS Cuentos: A Journal of Counternarratives by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Humboldt State University. For more information, please contact kyle.morgan@humboldt.edu.
Reflection

Elizabeth Rosales

The writing process for my journals was rather pleasing. In class I was able to complete all my writings, and when I would have the chance to look over it, I would edit all the areas that needed to be edited. Aside from the writing I really did like the rewriting because I was able to catch all my errors. I like editing my papers since it helps improve my grammar skills. When it came to being edited by the class I was kind of worried because my writing is hard to understand, especially when it came to the journals because they were freewrites, meaning all over the place. When I heard that the class would edit our work I went back, I tried to make it readable and easy to follow along. It did lose some parts but only parts that didn’t make sense to anyone else but to me since I was the one who lived the story.

When the class edited my papers, I did get a paper that said it should be published, it was called “No Boundaries.” This made me happy because it was one of the papers I put my heart and soul into, it was about my love and passion of music. As I read the comments and opinions of my peers, it help me through my editing phase before I submit it to the class for the class grade. Once I revised the new and old copies, I was excited to see two of my papers recommended for the publication. Although I was kind of sad to see one of my best freewrite was not one of them. It was good for the students, but once reedited it didn’t make the cut. The two that did make the cut were “What’s expected?” and “Mightier than the Pen.” Although both stories have a lot of comments, I did have trouble writing them and actually am still debating if I should publish them. The stories are very close to me since they kind of talk about things I don’t really talk to others about. Over all the writing processes was rather entertaining and intriguing.