A Lie

Gabriela De La Torre
Humboldt State University

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.humboldt.edu/courageouscuentos

Part of the Bilingual, Multilingual, and Multicultural Education Commons, Chicana/o Studies Commons, Civic and Community Engagement Commons, Community-Based Learning Commons, Creative Writing Commons, Curriculum and Instruction Commons, Domestic and Intimate Partner Violence Commons, Educational Sociology Commons, Ethnic Studies Commons, Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies Commons, Gender and Sexuality Commons, History Commons, Inequality and Stratification Commons, Latin American Languages and Societies Commons, Latina/o Studies Commons, Modern Literature Commons, Politics and Social Change Commons, Race and Ethnicity Commons, Reading and Language Commons, and the Theory, Knowledge and Science Commons

Recommended Citation

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 4.0 License
© 2016 Department of Critical Race, Gender & Sexuality Studies (CRGS) at Humboldt State University. This Counternarratives and Reflections is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at Digital Commons @ Humboldt State University. It has been accepted for inclusion in CouRaGeouS Cuentos: A Journal of Counternarratives by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Humboldt State University. For more information, please contact kyle.morgan@humboldt.edu.
A Lie

Gabriela De La Torre

My dad calls, “¿Cómo te va, mi chula?”

I lie. “Bien papá, todo bien.”

“¿Hay algo que no te pareció? ¿Quieres que vaya por tí?”

“No papá, gracias.” I fake laughter.

The truth is—I’m not telling him the truth. I’m not really okay.

I am not telling him everything.

I’m not telling him that everyday I feel like I don’t belong.
I don’t tell him about the looks me and my friends get on the bus.

I don’t tell him about the men in their trucks, revving their engines, as I hurry on the crosswalk.

I will never tell him about the man at the bus stop.

Never.

I was not hurt, but I felt so unsafe, like I am not ready for the real world.

My dad has always told me, “Gabby, no sabes lo que hay allá ‘fuera.’”
Rebellious I replied,
“Well, I will never know—if you don’t let me.”

Well, he let me,

and

I don’t feel as brave as I used to feel.
I am not as fearless as I used to be.

I bought pepper spray.

I look over my shoulder constantly.

I don’t feel safe.